BRIEF/MINI BIOGRAPHY

Hans Hoekstra is a pediatric gastroenterologist from the Jeroen Bosch Teaching Hospital in 's-Hertogenbosch, The Netherlands. After his pediatric training in Groningen, he was awarded with a scholarship for further training at Montreal University. For a long time he was head of the pediatric department and appointed as dean with active involvement in the national curriculum changes for all medical specialties.

His research concerned chronic diarrhea and acute gastroenteritis. He is an active member of the ESPGHAN (European Society for Pediatric Gastroenterology, Hepatology, and Nutrition) and was chairman of the working group on acute gastroenteritis. In this respect he was one of the members of the group that published, in close cooperation with the ESPID (European Society for Pediatric Infectious Diseases), the first Evidence-Based Guidelines on the management of acute gastroenteritis in children. He is author of more than 100 international publications and chapters in textbooks.
